What is the Construction Leadership Council?

The Construction Leadership Council (CLC) is a young professional's organization under the Associated General Contractors of Middle Tennessee that provides opportunities to network, gain knowledge, engage the community in Middle Tennessee.

We believe that strong leadership is critical to the future success and prosperity of the construction industry and we must invest in our young leaders, encouraging them to get involved in the industry and association activities.

CLC members are encouraged to participate in all AGC activities, but we put special focus on the under 40 industry professionals through monthly meetings that include highlighted guest speakers, educational focused topics, networking opportunities, and specific trainings.

Who qualifies for the CLC?

The Middle Tennessee Branch of the CLC is open to all rising industry professionals. A firm may nominate as many eligible participants as it wishes. Annual membership dues per person: $200/year.

Please note: If membership is paid by the CLC member's company, it belongs to the company, not the individual.

What's in it for you?

- Gain insight into the role the AGC plays in the construction industry and how the association's services can help your company
- Develop strong leadership skills and techniques
- Network and exchange information with others who work in the construction industry
- Educational opportunities catered to young professionals
